Community Care Fund: Introduction

The Community Care Fund (CCF) is a trust fund established in early 2011 under the Secretary for Home Affairs Incorporation Ordinance (Cap. 1044) with the Secretary for Home Affairs Incorporated as its trustee. Its main objective is to provide assistance to people facing economic difficulties, in particular those who fall outside the social safety net or those within the safety net but have special circumstances that are not covered. In addition, the CCF may implement measures on a pilot basis to help the Government identify those that can be considered for incorporation into the Government's regular assistance and service programmes.

In late 2010, the then Chief Executive appointed the Steering Committee on the CCF as chaired by the Chief Secretary for Administration to oversee and co-ordinate the work of the CCF. An Executive Committee and four Sub-committees (Education, Home Affairs, Medical and Welfare) were set up under the Steering Committee to support the operation of the CCF.

The terms of the above-mentioned committees/sub-committees ended in end 2012 and the CCF has since 2013 been integrated into the work of the Commission on Poverty (CoP) as reinstated by the current-term Government. The CCF Task Force, set up under the CoP as chaired by the Chief Secretary for Administration, is responsible for advising the CoP on the CCF's various arrangements (including investment, finance and administrative operations), as well as the formulation of assistance programmes, the co-ordination and overseeing of the implementation of assistance programmes and the reviewing of their effectiveness. The CCF Task Force will also liaise closely with other CoP task forces and provide mutual support, so as to draw up programmes to provide assistance to the underprivileged.

The operation of the CCF is guided by the following principles:

- (1) building a caring culture in society by gathering the efforts of various sectors of the community and encouraging the better-off to contribute;
- (2) programmes should be people-oriented with assistance directly provided to beneficiaries; administrative costs or involvement of implementing agencies should be minimised though the need for non-governmental organisations' help to reach out to target groups outside the existing service network will not be precluded; programmes should be multifarious in nature; and the vetting process should be streamlined to ensure cost-effectiveness;
- (3) programmes should complement the assistance and services provided by the Government or other charitable funds; duplication of efforts should be avoided as far as practicable; and
- (4) operation of the CCF will mainly be funded by investment returns on the seed capital, but the seed capital may be deployed in accordance with the principle of financial prudence in response to needs.

The target beneficiaries of the CCF are those facing economic difficulties and in need of assistance.

The Government has injected $5 billion and $15 billion into the CCF in 2011 and 2013 respectively, and the CCF also accepts donations from the community. As at end August 2013, the balance of the CCF is around $20.9 billion.

Way Forward

Over the past two years, the Community Care Fund (CCF) rolled out various assistance programmes which is a manifestation of the flexibility of CCF operation. In addition, through the continuous review and evaluation mechanism under the CCF, relevant Government departments/organisations responsible for implementing the programmes could draw on experience gained and collect data as soon as possible to determine which programmes need to be revised or extended, or have been proven effective for incorporation into the Government's regular assistance programme.

Following the additional injection of $15 billion into the CCF in 2013, the capacity of the CCF to plug the gaps in the existing system will be enhanced, and more assistance programmes and pilot schemes will be launched to help those who are facing economic difficulties. In addition, the implementation of programmes which are proved to be effective but have yet to be incorporated into the Government's regular assistance programme for the time being will also be continued so that assistance can be provided to the needy continuously.

The CCF will take into account the views of the public and stakeholders and continue to launch more programmes to provide appropriate assistance to the underprivileged and low-income families.
